NAME/TYPE OF MEDIA	TYPE OF EVENT (PRESENTATION, PRINT ARTICLE PUBLISHED, RADIO, ETC.)
KVOM RADIO	01/14/2015 Jaynie Jones spoke on radio on Flu- Widespread influenza activity is being reported in most U.S. states, with influenza A (H3N2) viruses most common. H3N2-predominant flu seasons have been associated with more hospitalizations and deaths in older people and young children in the past. In addition, approximately two-thirds of H3N2 viruses that have been tested at CDC are antigenically or genetically different from the H3N2 vaccine virus. This difference suggests that vaccine effectiveness may be reduced this season. High hospitalization rates are being observed, similar to what was seen during the 2012-2013 influenza season. Hospitalization rates are especially high among people 65 years and older. In this context, the use of influenza antiviral drugs as an adjunct to vaccination becomes even more important than usual in protecting people from influenza. Antiviral medications are effective in treating influenza and reducing complications. Antivirals are available and recommended, but evidence from the current and previous influenza seasons suggests that they are severely underutilized. Influenza viral characterization data indicates that 48% of the influenza A (H3N2) viruses collected and analyzed in the United States from October 1 through November 22, 2014 were antigenically "like" the

	2014-2015 influenza A (H3N2) vaccine component, but that 52% were antigenically different (drifted) from the H3N2 vaccine virus. In past seasons during which predominant circulating influenza viruses have been antigenically drifted, decreased vaccine effectiveness has been observed. Vaccination has been found to provide some protection against drifted viruses. Though reduced, this cross-protection might reduce the likelihood of severe outcomes such as hospitalization and death. In addition, vaccination will offer protection against circulating influenza strains that have not undergone significant antigenic drift from the vaccine viruses (such as influenza A (H1N1) and B viruses). We encourage all citizens to come to the LHU to receive their flu shot. It is not to late. We accept walk-ins from 8:00am – 4:30pm

INFANT MORTALITY	X	The Madison County Health Coalition partnered with UAMS, U of A Extension Office, and Project FOCUS to host its sixth safety baby shower for pregnant ladies in Madison County. Each pregnant woman brought a support person with her to the shower. We follow the AR Children’s Hospital curriculum. Clients were educated on numerous injury prevention topics including: poison prevention, correct temperature, the period of purple crying, safe sleep, fall prevention, car seat safety, tobacco prevention, Act 811, drowning, and burns/scald prevention. Each pregnant participant left the shower with numerous injury prevention items like a car seat, outlet covers, bath thermometer, etc. They also received a copy of the “period of purple crying” dvd. Community members donated baby items that were given away as door prizes.

OTHERS: MARSHALLESE CULTURAL TRAINING	X	The Madison County Health Coalition hosted a Marshallese Cultural Training to community members. Sandy Hainline-Williams, RN/ADH was the guest speaker. She gave a brief overview of the Marshallese culture at the MCHC meeting which had over 40 people in attendance. MCHC offered a more in depth two hour training directly after the coalition meeting. There were over 50 community members that attended the afternoon training which represented a diverse group including school teachers and school administration, DHS, health department, local civic organizations, businesses, and local medical offices. MCHC received very positive feedback from the community and hope to offer more trainings in the future.
